PARENTING STYLES AND JUVENILE DELINQUENCY

MS. SUNANDA R. HELKAR

DR. MADUKAR G. SHINDE

Abstract

Delinquency can be defined as commission or omission of an act defined as a crime or an offence by the State. Juvenile delinquency is the extensive term given to adolescents who carry out violations. Juveniles are the individuals who haven't arrived at adulthood or the age of majority. Adulthood or the age of majority in a lawful framework is dictated by the law. It covers anything from little wrongdoing to a severe wrongdoing. Parenting styles are divided into three groups: authoritarian, authoritative, and permissive. Many researches show that authoritarian and permissive parenting styles have influenced Juvenile delinquency. Thus, parenting style affect on child's behavior directly and indirectly. Parenting styles is one of the important factors in the study of delinquency.

Key Words: Juvenile Delinquency, Parenting Styles.

Introduction:

Juvenile delinquency is an old issue. It has been examined by Lawyers, Psychiatric, Criminologist and Sociologists, of various countries have attempted to comprehend causes behind delinquency. The methodology of these instructions towards the issue has been to some degree not quite the same as one another. Delinquency is fundamentally a legal idea characterized in various ways in various terms and places. Along these lines, drinking, battling, and a few types of conduct may call reprobate at once in a specific culture, however might be endorsed at some other point or in another culture.

In Indian culture, the term juvenile delinquent is commonly applied to youth under 18 years old who showed conduct which is prohibited by law. The quantity of youthful people who are detected, reported, or accused in association of delinquent conduct started to increase significantly after 1948 and has kept on rising. Some portion of this rise is represented by fast increase in the quantity of more youngsters and teenagers in the population during this period. Unfortunately however the frequency of registered delinquency has been rising quicker than the young population, and subsequently, a decrease in the pace of delinquency during the coming decade shows up profoundly impossible. (Quay, 1965).

Parenting Styles:

The present examination analyzed changes in parenting styles toward kids dependent on interactional theory. Darling and Steinberg (1993) defined parenting styles as attitudes and behaviors of parents toward their children. Parenting styles consisted of emotional contexts for parents' behaviors (Darling & Steinberg, 1993). The study of parenting styles focused on the collaboration of various parenting
